THE LEGISLATIVE APPROPRIATION BILL

Taken Up for Action by the House of Representatives.

MR. DINGLEY'S SPEECH.

He Compares the Work of This With the Former Congress.

SENATE.

In presenting a petition of the St. Louis chapter of the American Institution of Architects of St. Louis, Mo., asking for the passage of the House bill relating to the appointment of architects for the erection of government buildings for the government, Mr. Vest (Mo.) said that for several years the architects of the United States, through their organizations and individually through their organizations and individually, had come to Congress asking for the passage of a law compelling the supervising architect of the Treasury Department to advertise for plans and specifications from the architects of the country, for all public buildings erected by the government. A bill had passed the House of Representatives some weeks ago providing such legislation, and containing a clause that the supervising architect of the Treasury Department should pay a reasonable price to the architects who submitted plans and specifications. The effect of that provision would have been that any architect could have come to Washington or remained away and sent his plans and specifications and then had a claim against the government for $500 or $1,000, as the case might be. That bill had come over to the Senate committee on public buildings and grounds. The committee had struck out that provision and changed the bill as it had passed the Senate the other day. The change made was only that architects would be paid whose plans and specifications were accepted by the Treasury Department. In other words, the bill as passed by the Senate applied the same rule to the business of the government as had come to Congress asking for the passage the bill as passed by the Senate applied the same rule to the business of the government as every gentleman would apply to his own busi-ness, and only the successful architect in the competition was to be paid. He hoped that the statement would answer all the letters sent on

House bill granting to the Santa Fe, Prescot and Phoenix Railway Company the right of way across the Whipple Barracks military reservation in Arizona was taken from the calendar

The Benate then proceeded to the consideration of unobjected House bills on the calendar and passed the following:

To ratify and confirm agreement between the Puyallup Indians and the Northern Pacific Railroad Company for right of way through the Puvallup reservation. the loss.

the Puyallup reservation.

There were also sixteen House pension bills passed. The Senate bill for the relief of the assignees or legal representatives of John Roach, deceased, to pay the balance due on the United States ship Dolphin ($8,165), was taken from the calendar, and, after some opposition by Mr. McPherson (N. J.), was passed. THE DOCTRINE OF ASYLUM. Mr. Turpie (Ind.) offered the following reso lution, which was laid on the table and ordered printed: Believing that the doctrine of asylum. as practiced and approved by a very large majority of the members of the family of nations, is highly expedient, and that jurisdiction in what are known as political offenses ought not to be extra territorial, it is concluded, as the sense of the Senate, that no treaty should be approved which proposes to oust the courts or magistrates of the United States of the right to determine in each case under the allegations and proof therein whether under the law of nations.

The Vice President appointed Messrs. Cullom (Ill.) and White (La.) on the board of visitors at the next annual examination of cadets at THE NEW YORK BRIDGE.

Mr. Blackburn (Ky.) moved to proceed to the consideration of Senate bill to authorize the New York and New Jersey bridge companies to construct and maintain a bridge across the Hudson river between New York city and the state of New Jersey (the bill originally in-troduced by him March 18, 1892, and reported adversely May 20, 1892).
Mr. Cullom (Ill.) rose to make a statement, but was met by the objection (from Mr. Black-burn) that the motion was not debatable. I know it is not, said Mr. Cullom; if it were I would say something.

So would I, retorted Mr. Blackburn.
I hope the motion will not prevail, said Mr. Cullom.
I hope it will, rejoined Mr. Blackburn. The vote was taken and Mr. Elackburn's mo tion was defeated—yeas, 22; nays, 34.

THE CAR COUPLER BILL. The Senate then resumed consideration the substitute reported from the committee on interstate commerce to promote the safety of employes and travelers upon railroads by compelling common carriers engaged in interstate commerce to equip their cars with automatic commerce to equip their cars with automatic couplers and continuous brakes, and their locomotives with driving-wheel brakes.

In the course of his explanation of the bill Mr. Cullom (Ill.), who was in charge of it, said (in answer to questions) that there were 1,100,000 freight cars in the country; that there were forty different patterns of automatic couplers which worked together, and that if owners of 75 per cent of the freight cars agreed upon a particular type of coupler the interstate commerce commission would fix that as the one to be used.

Mr. Harris (Tenn.) asked Mr. Cullom whether the railroad companies were not adopting the the railroad companies were not adopting the automatic coupler as rapidly as their financial condition would enable them.

Mr. Cullom admitted that railroad companie Mr. Cullom admitted that railroad companies insisted that they were doing the best they could, but not one-third of the freight cars were provided with couplers or brakes.

Mr. Vilas (Wis.) asked Mr. Cullom whether he knew of any instance where a railroad company deferred paying dividends in order to adopt means to protect the lives of its employes.

Mr. Cullom knew no instance of the kind.

The trouble was that railroad companies were looking more to finances than to the protection of the lives and limbs of their employes.

Mr. Wolcott (Col.) inquired whether the association of freight men had not protested against the adoption of automatic couplers and expressed a preference for the link and pin?

Mr. Cullom admitted that the freight men would prefer the link and pin rather than have the variety of couplers that were now being used, but if there was a uniform coupler established they would, of course, be in favor of it. He gave statistics of the loss of life and lima by railroad employes through accidents, and

He gave statistics of the loss of life and limit by railroad employes through accidents, and said that the country looked to Congress to hasten the time when such tremendous slaughter would cease. It had been stated (a startling fact if true) that the total loss of railroad employes in killed and injured in eight years was equal to the total number of men engaged in railroad service one year. These men, he said, would be safer if they were enlisted in the army in time of war than they were now, as railroad employes.

Mr. Hunton (Vs.) said that he was not able to give his assent to the bill, notwithstanding its very seductive title. He believed that men who had devoted their lives to the building and management of railroads would conduct their the journal. According to that instrument the House had accomplished nothing yesterday. The Speaker (smiling) replied that the journal was correct and it was thereupon approved. There were a number of House bills, with Senate amendments, upon the Speaker's table, and their appropriate disposition consumed a good deal of time. Among those in which the Senate amendments were concurred in was that relating to contracts of common carriers (by water) and to ascertain obligations, duties and rights in connection with the carriage of property. (This is what is known as the Harter bill or lading bill.)

Mr. Bacon (N. Y.), from the committee on banking and currency, reported a resolution call-ing on the Secretary of the Treasury for infor-mation as to the names of banks, banking associations and companies which have communi-cated with him asking for the repeal of the Sherman silver law. Adopted.

THE LEGISLATIVE APPROPRIATION BILL. The House then proceeded in committee of the whole to the consideration of the legislative appropriation bill. Mr. Dockery (Mo.), in charge of the measure. stated that the appropriations carried by the bill amounted to $21,684,498 against an appro-priation of $21,900,132 for the current fiscal year and against an estimate of $22,170,074. Mr. Dingley (Me.) said that the appropriations made at this session would aggregate $531,000,000. As they were $507,000,000 at the last session, the total appropriation made by this Congress would reach $1,038,000,000 against $988,000,000 made by the Fifty-first Congress, an increase of $50,000.000 an increase of $50,000,000. The actual current expenditures paid by taxation for the fiscal years 1891 and 1892, covered by the last Congreen, were $700,000,000. The actual expendi-tures for 1893 and 1894, covered by the present Congress, would probably reach at least $780,000,000.

The revenues for the present fiscal year would reach at least $386,000,000, probably from two to four millions more, and the expenditures $384,-If there should be no tariff legislation to disturb, the revenue for the fiscal year 1894 would undoubtedly reach $405,000,000 and the expenditures should not exceed $390,000,000, and would not if the river and harbor expenditures should not exceed $15,000,000, which was $2,000,000 more than was ever expended. If they should go up to $33,000,000, as contemplated by the action of the House, there would inevitably be a deficiency next year even with a revenue of $405,000,000.

The tariff legislation foreshadowed would undoubtedly diminish the revenue, unless the duties should be made low enough to enormously swell importations. The wool and woolens bill passed by the House at the last half millions on manufactures of wool, on the basis of the importations of the last calendar year, and it would require an enormous in-crease of importations of woolen goods to the extent of eight millions, running up to one hundred and seventeen millions, to make good

Mr. Reed (Me.), in an innocent tone, put the inquiry to the chair as to the correctness of the journal. According to that instrument the House had accomplished nothing yesterday.

The Speaker (smiling) replied that the journal was correct and it was thereupon approved.

There were a number of House bills, with Senate amendments, upon the Speaker's table, and their appropriate disposition consumed a good deal of time. Among those in which the Senate amendments were concurred in was that relating to contracts of common carriers (by water) and to ascertain obligations, duties and rights in connection with the carriage of property.
